Randolph OB/GYN's Cornelius Office

CORNELIUS, N.C. - Dr. Cathryn Crosland has joined the Randolph OB/GYN practice, serving patients in the Cornelius office at 18515 Statesville Road.

Dr. Crosland received a bachelor's degree in medical technology from the University of Kentucky. She worked as a Clinical Chemist at the UK Medical Center for one year before attending medical school there. She completed her internship and residency at Carolinas Medical Center.

She was a physician/partner in another local OB/GYN practice for 20 years before joining Randolph OB/GYN. Dr. Crosland is certified by the American Board of Obstetrics and Gynecology. She is a fellow of the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

Growing up in Kentucky, Dr. Crosland looked up to her mother who was a Med-Tech. This inspired her to enter the medical field first as a researcher and then as a physician. She found her niche in a field that was primarily male, but serving women's health. Her philosophy was and continues to be simple, treat each patient like an individual and meet the special needs of today's women.

In her spare time she enjoys Pilates, cooking and travel. Dr. Crosland lives in Davidson and is the mother of teenage twins.
