

Randolph OB/GYN To Open Office In Uptown Charlotte's EpiCentre

CHARLOTTE, N.C. – Randolph OB/GYN, one of Charlotte's most experienced obstetrics and gynecology practices, will open a new third location in early 2010 in the EpiCentre in uptown Charlotte.

They will share space with First Charlotte Physicians on the second level (Suite D-230) of the EpiCentre complex, built on the site of the former Charlotte Civic Center. The location is at the southeast corner of the complex, at the intersection of East Fourth Street and the College.

"We are attracting an increasing number of patients who work and live uptown, and now are coming to our main office at 2711 Randolph Road," said Dr. John McNamara, a partner in the practice. "This new location will be much more convenient for them, and we hope to also attract other patients in the uptown area."

This will be Randolph OB/GYN's second satellite office. The first one at 18515 Statesville Road in Cornelius opened in early 2009. Dr. Cathryn Crosland, who lives in Davidson, is the primary practitioner, and others in the eight-physician practice also work there at scheduled times.

Randolph OB/GYN was founded in 1976 in its Randolph Road location and currently serves thousands of patients in the greater Charlotte area. Personal attention and caring for each individual is one of the practice's core values. More information at www.RandolphOBGYN.com.
